KOREAN AMERICAN FAMILY SERVICES
We are proud to support our community.

We build long-term financial relationships, One customer at a time.
Dear Friends,

Welcome to Korean American Family Services’ (KFAM’s) 34th Anniversary Gala, “Fostering Love.”

This year we’re proud to highlight our Asian Foster Family Initiative (AFFI), a program we started in 2014 to recruit, train and support Korean and other Asian Pacific Islander (API) foster parents to provide culturally appropriate homes to API foster children. When we started 3 years ago, there were zero active, trained Korean foster parents in the Greater Los Angeles area. We discovered Korean children who were placed in foster homes that did not share the same food, customs, or even language. Today, we are proud to announce that there are 32 trained Korean foster parents who have taken in 45 foster children, including 12 children who have been adopted or are in permanent legal guardianships.

In December 2016, KFAM became the first licensed Foster Family Agency in the nation specializing in the needs of Korean and API communities. We are currently conducting trainings for the Korean and Chinese communities, and have plans to expand into Filipino and other API communities soon. Working with community partners and donors, we have taken the initial step towards building the first generation of API foster parents in Southern California. With 600-800 API foster kids in LA County alone, there is still much work to be done.

We thank Dean and Maria Turnmeyer-Suh, our Keynote Speakers. Dean and Maria became foster parents three years ago when KFAM conducted our first foster parent training. They have gone on to foster 12 children, seeing it as their moral imperative to provide safe homes for abused and neglected children as long as they are able to do so. Thank you for inspiring us and reminding us that we can always do more for vulnerable children who need our love and support. Thank you, Hansun and Jiho, for performing for us this evening. We are so grateful to you for sharing your musical talents with us. And we are in awe of your mother, Grace, who has raised you to become the talented and poised young gentlemen that you are.

Thank you to our 24 staff, 80+ annual volunteers, and 16 board members who keep KFAM running every day.

Most of all, thanks to all of you who are here supporting KFAM. To our guests, donors, and Gala sponsors, including our Title Sponsor Commonwealth Business Bank: without your help, AFFI could never have become what it is today. We are indebted to you all.

Sincerely,

Message from the Board

JIH OH AND HANSUN

Jiho and Hansun met in 2014 and the two have been inseparable since then. Jiho has been playing the piano since he was a young boy and his older brother, Hansun, started playing the piano two years ago. Their musical journey was influenced by their mother, Grace, who is a violin and piano instructor. The two have performed at three recitals and events around Southern California. Jiho's favorite piano piece is "Treimerei" and Hansun's favorite piano piece is "Swan Lake." Their favorite duet piece is "Jesus Loves Me."

When Hansun began playing the piano, it was very difficult for him. Hansun, who is on the autism spectrum, had never played a musical instrument before. He struggled with memorizing piano pieces and remembering where the notes were located on the piano. However, he really enjoyed the melody created from pressing the keys on the piano. He tried really hard and started to pick up tones and rhythms. His mother saw Hansun enjoyed learning how to play the piano, so even if they had to press the same note 1,000 times before he was ready to move on, they continued on. Jiho grew closer to his brother as they practiced playing the piano every day.

One day, the three of them were invited to perform at a recital. Hansun really wanted to participate and play his music in front of an audience. After six months of practicing with his mother and brother for two hours every day, he was able to memorize three piano pieces, including one duet with his brother, Jiho. After the recital, Hansun felt more confident and proud of his achievement. Since then, he has been invited to perform at various other events and today he will be performing with his brother.

DEAN AND MARIA TURNMUEYER-SUH

Dean and Maria Turnmeyer-Suh first met in high school in Aurora, Colorado. Dean, a recent immigrant from Korea at the time, was taking ESL classes. Maria, a Japanese born adoptee, immigrated to the U.S. at the age of 7 and was on the college track. Though they were never in the same class, it wasn’t long before Dean and Maria started talking to each other. Soon after their high school graduation, the two were married and had a daughter. Dean and Maria moved to Los Angeles, where she went to LACC for 2 years before transferring to CSUN. Dean also went to CSUN and graduated with a MSA in Fine Arts. Today, Maria is a full-time English Professor at CSUN.

After their daughter went off to college, they took a 10 year ‘hiatus’ from parenting. One day as they looked at each other, they began to wonder about their life’s purpose. For 20 years, Maria has worked with students who were unprepared for college (majority of them emancipated foster youth) and taught them how to become college bound. Her years of interaction with these children, hearing their stories and getting to know them on a personal level, encouraged her to care deeply for these kids. It was not long after, Dean saw a news report about KFAM and the need for more Asian foster parents. It was this steady accumulation that led Dean to reach for the phone and call Korean American Family Services.

Dean and Maria decided to see if fostering was right for them. They said, “it seemed unethical and immoral not to try.” They had a six bedroom house in Palmdale that was empty. Dean and Maria first became foster parents three years ago after going through KFAM’s Asian Foster Family Initiative program.

Dean and Maria were contacted by social workers and were asked to foster toddlers. Maria remembers being nervous and decided to go shopping to calm her nerves to welcome the children into their home. Fostering was a whole new world. Some children come into the foster care system with nothing. Maria remembers a little girl, barely 2 years old, who was brought in by a social worker wearing nothing but a diaper. Dean and Maria soon realized that whenever they got a phone call, they were often the absolute last hope for these children.

As of today, Dean and Maria have fostered 12 children and counting. They plan to foster until they are unable to. They never set limits and don’t know how all this will end, but as long as they can, they want to continue being foster parents. They are both in their 50s and still very healthy. Their philosophy is, “We will foster till we can’t.”

Since 2014, Dean and Maria have been fully committed to fostering children and being involved with KFAM’s Asian Foster Family Initiative. They have spoken at AFFI events to share their experiences and to encourage others to become foster parents. They will be awarded the Community Visionary Award tonight, in recognition of their commitment and dedicated service to foster and nurture vulnerable youth to ensure they have a brighter future.

FOLLOWING MY HEART

Grace is a graduate of the first cohort of the Asian Foster Family Initiative Program at KFAM. As a resource (foster) parent, she hopes her story will encourage others to become resource parents.

“I have always wanted a big family. I love children and wanted a lot of children. But things didn’t go according to what I expected, which happens all the time in life. At first, I wanted to adopt, but the process was a lot harder than I assumed. Then one day, it was like God’s answer. I met someone who introduced me to a new concept called fostering. I asked around for an agency or anyone who could help me. After searching I found KFAM’s Asian Foster Family Initiative (AFFI).

The AFFI program had just started in the winter of 2014 and was recruiting people to become foster parents. I learned there was a shortage of Korean parents in the fostering system in Los Angeles County. I remember at the AFFI Orientation, hearing one story about a child who only spoke Korean and ate Korean food but was placed in different ethnic homes where only English was spoken. The Korean boy eventually lost his native tongue and forgot most of his culture in less than a year. This broke my heart. I knew this was my calling. I had prayed for years to grow my family and my heart had a huge space for children.

I joined the first cohort in hopes of fostering a child and a younger brother for my biological son, who was six at the time. But I was open-hearted and minded. I was open to fostering any age, sex or race. Becoming a foster parent wasn’t easy. The training consisted of ten workshops, first aid and CPR training, applications to the county, and home inspections. This entire process took about three and a half months. I think the hardest part was learning about myself and learning how to prepare my biological son for the changes our family was going to face. But I knew we would be fine. We are all God’s children and all are a member of God’s large family.

I still remember this day like it happened yesterday. I got a call from KFAM and was asked if I could foster a Korean boy who was seven years old. I didn’t have time to think, I replied Yes. When Hansun first came to our family, I won’t lie, it was very difficult for me and my son. Hansun is on the autism spectrum, he was very angry, didn’t eat and had an eye problem. But I knew the moment that he walked into our home, he was my son.

In the beginning it was very hard because my two sons did not get along. Jiho never had to share anything of his as an only child and he didn’t like sharing his mom. Also, Hansun wouldn’t eat. He only wanted junk food like cheetos, pizza and hamburgers. Every meal was a battle with Hansun. I would fight for him to try to eat and he would be upset because he wanted to just eat what he wanted. He didn’t like the rice or bean soup. Then Hansun would get angry and once he got mad he couldn’t control his anger. He would threaten to leave and start packing his backpack. Then in the middle of packing his belongings, he would start crying and I would comfort him.

This cycle continued every day for the first couple weeks. But I saw him changing, little by little. About two months after he started to live with us, he started to eat the food that I cooked for us. This was the biggest breakthrough and a huge moment that we had overcome all together. Shortly after, Hansun came to me asking if he could play soccer. He had always wanted to play soccer but never had the opportunity to join a team. After he joined the team, he showed up wearing his uniform and it drew tears to my eyes; such little things bring children happiness and pleasure. I knew I had to earn more money to give my children more opportunities to play basketball, soccer, and learn how to swim. I knew my life was going to be busy and hectic with picking up more work hours but I wanted to do this for my two sons.

I still can’t forget the first day Hansun called me “mom.” I was filled with so much love, joy and trust. That was when I knew, I now had two beautiful, loving and handsome sons.

Hansun joining our family was a present to Jiho and I. After Hansun joined us, Jiho had to learn how to be patient, how to share and understand it was not a competition but to learn to work together and help each other. Now, their relationship is like any other siblings. They eat together, ride their bikes together, have arguments, go to the park and play basketball together. I am so happy to see that my sons have developed a close relationship and have grown to love each other.

My future goals are to move to a bigger house by the end of the year and continue to foster children. If I am lucky enough, I would like to foster three more girls and one more son. My ideal family would consist of three boys and three girls.”
34th Anniversary Gala: Fostering Love

Stories from our Resource (Foster) Families through our Asian Foster Family Initiative
WE WILL FOSTER TILL WE CAN’T

Dean and Maria graduated from the first cohort of KFAM’s AFFI program in 2014. Since then they have devoted their lives to fostering and changing the lives of foster children. They hope by sharing their story, more individuals and parents will become resource (foster) parents.

“We believe our life’s purpose was to become foster parents. I (Dean) saw a public announcement on LA18 about the lack of Asian foster parents and decided to talk to Maria about attending orientation to learn more about becoming foster parents. I (Maria) worked with emancipated foster youth for twenty years, where many of my students encouraged me to become a foster parent. I never acted upon it, but when Dean brought it up; I thought all signs pointed at fostering. Let’s try it.

Throughout the training, topics like culture sensitivity, understanding heritage and trans-racial relationships were brought up. Because the child placed in our home would have his or her own culture, as foster parents embracing and creating opportunities for cultural understanding was emphasized. This hit home to us. My wife and I are a blended family. I am Korean American, my wife is Japanese American adopted by a Caucasian family and our daughter is Korean-Japanese American.

We have lived decades embracing our differences and similarities. We absolutely understand how important food, rituals, language, customs and the aesthetic environment are all very important to a child’s sense of security.

When we fostered Hispanic children, we spoke as much Spanish as possible so the children would feel more comfortable and safe. When we fostered African American children we made sure they could watch (on TV or film) role models from their culture – we bought books that celebrated pride in African American culture, history, and heritage. We saw that if we spoke to the children in their native tongue, they acted and treated us differently.
One time, we had a Hispanic child who was having a difficult time adjusting, so we turned on the Telemundo channel and he started to put his wall down. Culture goes beyond race. We think the most important thing to do when you have a child placed that is not from your ethnic group is to ask questions right away. Once when we had a child who was Filipino, we asked our neighbors to teach us how to cook a Filipino dish and anything we needed to know about the customs. We learned there is a special gesture used in the Filipino culture and we began practicing Mano with the child. We live in Los Angeles, where there are so many restaurants, markets and events that celebrate all of our cultures. We understand the importance of culturally appropriate surroundings and go through great lengths to make sure our foster kids feel welcome and safe in our home. We enlist the help of our friends and often take the children on cultural field trips all in hopes that they are not ‘missing’ their culture in their lives.

We met our two sons at 11 pm in front of our doorstep. Brandon was four and Carter was two. They were brothers who had been taken away due to neglect and exposure to illegal substances in their home. When they first arrived, it was clear to see Brandon and Carter had not been taken care of. Brandon was wearing only a t-shirt with mismatched shoes, while Carter was wearing a shirt without any shoes. They had no personal belongings with them. Brandon was excited and wanted to explore every inch of our six bedroom home. Carter was sound asleep in the arms of the social worker. After the placement papers were signed, we gave the boys a bath and put them to sleep.

It was clear to see that the boys had developmental delays that had not been diagnosed. Both were non-verbal, and their methods of expressing themselves were different. Brandon was soon diagnosed as being on the autism spectrum and Carter had detachment problems and serious developmental delays. Brandon spoke and desired attention, however Carter’s lack of emotion worried us. Instead of crying or expressing frustration, two year old Carter would bang his head against the floor or just sit in his crib without making a sound. We immediately took Carter to therapy, fifteen hours a week. It was heartbreaking. Thinking about the boys kept us up at night. But we knew, it could only get better from here and it would take a lot of love, patience and time. In the beginning, Carter refused to be held and rejected any kind of affection. We started to take the boys out more. KFAM helped the boys experience new adventures. We attended Lakers games, Dodger games and concerts at the Hollywood Bowl. We could see the boys enjoyed the events and it brought happiness to their lives, and ours. Overtime, through an accumulation of therapy, constant affection and family centered events, Carter slowly started opening up. He began talking, jumping, playing and became the bright and lively little boy that he was supposed to be. The brothers learned to trust, love and respect.

Currently, we are in the process of obtaining permanent legal guardianship of our boys. We love our boys and want only what is best for them. Though it can be challenging at times, we would not have it any other way. Everything, we mean Everything has changed since becoming foster parents. We chase after our children, sleep less, worry more and our once quiet home is now a fortress of fun and noise.

But children give us a different type of joy through their laughter, smiles and hugs that is hard to find elsewhere.

They will test your limits, but the reward is immediate and they help you become a kid again. Children keep you young at heart. Watching them grow and develop a little each day brings us happiness. What we learn from them also brings us joy and we count our blessings – they teach us, every day, what it means and what it takes to be a decent human being. They give us purpose, which helps us continue to grow and learn too. Most importantly, they teach us how to love unconditionally. We now know it is possible to bring individuals who were not “born by blood” into your family and to love unconditionally.

I (Maria) was adopted, but I was told that in Japan orphans were a curse and no one wanted to adopt children because they could come from “bad blood.” I understand where the stereotype surrounding orphans developed, but of course, they are not true. I know Asian culture is based on the celebration and importance of the community. There is a folklore that says it takes a village to raise a child. I think if Asians and Asian Americans knew there were so many Asian children in the foster system, they would step forward to care for the children. We cannot complain about the problems if we are not a part of a potential solution – whether that means fostering or adopting or supporting and providing resources for parents who foster and/or adopt. We can all contribute to help children who may potentially be forgotten, ignored or forced to live in despair and hopelessness. We have learned many things as foster parents. Fostering is a blessing and very fulfilling. We wouldn’t have it any other way. We will foster till we can’t.”
Finding a purposeful way to assist one another, turning belief into action, and working toward this ideal — these are the driving forces that lift up humanity and make a difference, one person at a time.

Health Care Leadership Awards
This year’s Fostering Love Gala’s Title Sponsor is Commonwealth Business Bank (CBB Bank). KFAM spoke with the President and CEO, Joanne Kim, about their 5+ year relationship with KFAM and working together to help and strengthen the Korean American community.

“Commonwealth Business Bank, also known as CBB Bank, was established in 2005 and earned a leadership position in serving the Korean-American business community. CBB Bank is a leading community bank recognized for its professional services, innovative banking solutions and passionate employees. Based in Los Angeles, California, CBB serves a diverse customer base from 8 full-service branches, 6 in Southern California and 2 in Texas, and from 6 loan production offices in Washington, Texas, Georgia, Colorado, and Ohio. With a deep understanding of business industries, CBB specializes in providing customized financial services and is a leader in C&I and SBA lending. We build partnerships by developing customized solutions that benefit each client’s business – One Client at a Time.

When we opened our door for business on March 9, 2005, we started with 20 employees and $23.1 million capital. Back in 2012, we set our vision to become a one-billion-dollar asset bank by end of 2017. As of July 31, 2017, we successfully reached our goal with more than $1 billion in assets, growing almost 45 times in just 12 years. CBB Bank is also recognized in our industry for the top-ranking Return on Equity (ROE), and Return on Assets (ROA). CBB Bank is ranked top 10 in the California Banks ranked by pre-tax ROA in the first quarter of 2017, and top 17th in the nation as ranked by 3-year average ROE in all publicly traded community banks.

In 2015, CBB Bank Foundation was established to educate, inspire and create opportunities for motivated individuals. The CBB Bank Foundation intends to achieve these goals by providing financial and volunteer support to qualifying nonprofit organizations whose main purpose include promoting financial literacy, improving equal access to financial opportunities, and supporting and strengthening local communities. Our goal is providing a long-term support for great pubic programs to take a strong foundation in our community. As our mission states “we build long-term financial relationships, one customer at a time,” we believe in building close person-to-person relationships in the surrounding communities in which we serve.

CBB has supported KFAM for over five years because we believe in the importance of our Korean-American heritage and our surrounding local community. In the past couple of years, we learned more about KFAM through Alvin Kang, our Board member, who also serves as an active member of KFAM’s Board. KFAM’s mission to support and strengthen Korean American families and individuals speaks the same language of the importance of individuals which we believe in. Also, as we believe that learning and education contribute to an individual’s strength and growth, KFAM’s counseling and prevention training program resonate with our mission.

As a first-generation immigrant, I have witnessed many domestic violence cases, caused by social, language, and cultural difficulties. Unfortunately, sometimes painful violence and force come from the closest family members. As a mother and a woman, I am drawn to protecting the rights and the welfare of the victims of such violence. I distinctively remember that KFAM was one of the very few, if not only, safe havens for abused women and children in early 80s. I sincerely thank KFAM for being the source of safety, strength, and growth for our community.”

KFAM’s Mission

KFAM’s mission is to support and strengthen Korean American families and individuals in the Greater Los Angeles area through counseling, education, and social services.

KFAM was founded in 1983 by immigrant Korean women inspired by the vision of Dr. Tae Young Lee, Korea’s first female attorney, an early advocate of the rights of women, and the founder of the Legal Aid Center for Family Relations in Korea. KFAM opened its doors to offer hope and help for immigrant families devastated by economic hardships, immigration stress, and family strife.

The original mission and vision live on through KFAM’s broad range of family intervention, mental health, and social services that provide an important safety net for families and community members. Our dedicated, skilled team of bilingual staff and volunteers serve over 6,000 adults and children each year with quality, culturally-responsive services and compassionate care that speak directly to the challenges among Korean American families undergoing trauma or adaptation stresses. Our services truly provide a vital safety net for resource-poor families without access to care.
